Visualise Facebook Data

Facebook has an astonishing amount of information about you. While you can access and download some of your Facebook data, it can be hard to understand once you've downloaded it. This visualisation tries to solve that problem, without requiring you to share your data with anyone.

About Us
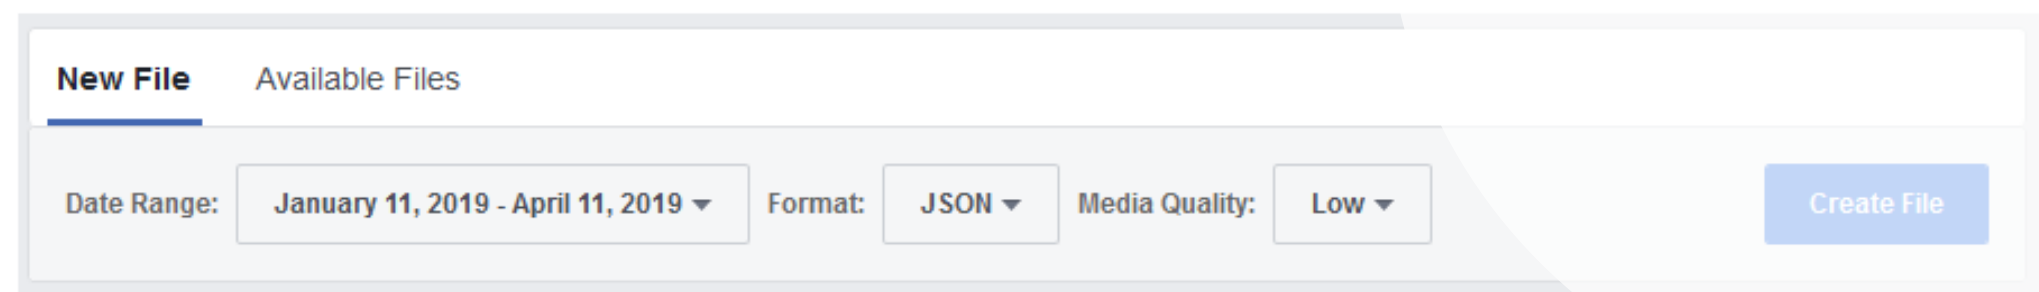

We are a group of researchers at the University of Technology Sydney and Western Sydney University. We developed this visualiser as part of the Consumer rights to personal data project, which was funded by the Australian Communications Consumer Action Network.

At a practical level, we hope the tool gives you some insight into your Facebook data and makes the data you have downloaded slightly more meaningful. More generally, we hope the visualiser contributes to the broader project of improving data literacy.

James Meese, Punit Jagasia and James Arvanitakis. Created by Mike Riethmuller.

To begin, download your data from Facebook. Follow the instructions under the heading: "How do I download a copy of my information on Facebook?".

Make sure you select the 'JSON' format and the media quality resolution as 'low'.
